LEBANON GOES DRY

After the Hardest Battle Ever Waged In Kentucky.

WETS WIN AT LAWRENCEBURG

In the local option election at Lebanon yesterday the dries won by a majority of thirty-three.

This election was perhaps the most hotly contested ever held in Kentucky. Both sides had thorough organization and contested every inch of ground. For the past six weeks the local option forces have held public meetings every night, and during the past two weeks oratory was heard in every quarter of the town at all hours of the day and "way up into the night."

Indeed the saloon people had a hard fight to come up against—they were forced to fight the combined forces of the churches; their arguments were not only met by argument, but by the pleadings of women and children as well.

Hundreds of men and women in Marion county assisted in the fight; lengthy petitions from the country districts were sent to Lebanon begging the people to vote for local option; school children—girls and boys—sought voters and made personal appeals; wives implored husbands; mothers upon bended knees pleaded with sons; sweethearts demanded of sweethearts that they vote to stamp out the liquor traffic in Lebanon, and yesterday's vote shows what wonderful powers these combined agencies are. It is almost impossible for the wets to win when a fight of this nature is made.

The crowd at Lebanon yesterday is estimated at from 10,000 to 15,000. The temperance parade was the most magnificent and inspiring ever held in the State. Old grey headed men and women, pretty young ladies and little children marched, shouted and sang; brass bands played, and banners and flags were waved. Little boys carried placards upon which were the words: "Vote For Wet!" Old grey headed fathers and mothers carried banners upon which were inscribed: "Vote For My Son!" Other placards bore the inscriptions: "Vote For Home!" "Vote For God!" "Vote For Right!"

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

It may be that our notes are a little lacking in spice and ginger this week, but we must confess to being human and tell you in all frankness that the charms of new-come spring have quite taken all other thoughts from our mind and we had almost forgotten that we were supposed to have any readers. Indeed we have contented at sundry times that such a thing as a reader of the High School Notes was a fiction, but we chanced to find record of a young lady at a distance who read them every week to see if she could find anything said about one of our high school boys. We regret to say to our shame that his name has appeared but four times in the last four months. Years ago when we were younger than now, especially "in the spring" we thought a week too long to wait and we can imagine the anxiety with which she has, week after week read the inane lines dignified by the name of "High School Notes."

Dear little girl, we will be more kind hereafter and we trust that often you may have us to thank for letting you hear from your lazy lover!

We have been negligent as we said before, but we were negligent in a good cause. To be exact we left town and spent our weekend vacation in Pleasant Grove where we gained permission to visit because that is the only part of the county where our name is not so obnoxious as to make a visit unpleasant in its consequences. We were not at all amiable when it came to the thoughts of returning to school. We would rather sit under the trees along the Beech or flange our legs over the suspension bridge at Poortown!

The ball team is in full practice now and will meet the town boys Friday in a match game.

In the spelling match between the eighth and sixth grade the former were victorious last Friday, while the seventh defeated the fifth grade students. The purpose of these spelling matches is practice and the selection of the best individual spellers of the school. Next Friday Prof. Colvin's room will spell against Prof. Thompson's grade. This promises to be the closest matchers, as the high school will have difficulty defeating the eighth year.

CONGRESSMAN BEN JOHNSON

Complimented When Selected to Make Trip to Panama.

Congressman Ben Johnson has returned from Panama, he having arrived at his home in Bardonia Monday evening. Mr. Johnson was one of thirty Congressmen who made the trip, the delegation being headed by Speaker Cannon. "In selecting the Congressmen to make this trip only those of practical minds and recognized ability were invited," says a press dispatch. The Sun considers that Mr. Johnson has been very considerably complimented, the more so when it is considered that he has not yet occupied a seat in Congress. Some important canal legislation will come up before the next Congress, and it was thought that a trip of investigation by Congressman who will be leaders in the next House would be the right thing, hence the trip was arranged.

Congressman Ben Johnson may never stand upon the floors of Congress and scrape the milky way with a silver tongue, but when it comes to making a practical speech, one full of meat and meaning, we know he will be as good as the best.

Unfortunate Accident.

Anderson News: Owen Baker, 14 years old, who lives with Mr. S. T. Sale in the country, recently met with a frightful accident. He was riding through a gate and in trying to close it, the horse reared, falling upon the little fellow. It is supposed the stirrup struck his ear in such a way as to sever it entirely from his head. Upon reaching home it was discovered the ear was gone and a member of the family returning to the gate found the missing member. Dr. Pavner was summoned and the ear sewed on, but in a few days it was found necessary to bring the brave young man to town, where the ear was again entirely removed. He spent several days at Mr. J. W. Sale's but improved so rapidly that he was taken home on Friday where he continues to improve. As soon as possible an artificial ear will take the place of the old one and the News sincerely hopes he will hear as well as ever.

Missionary Meeting.

The Central Association Fifth Sunday and Sunday meeting will meet with the Baptist church at this place. There will be an address Tuesday evening by Rev. W. D. Spinks, a missionary who has been at work in Africa. The services will commence at 9:30, a. m., Saturday and continue throughout the day.

On Sunday, Rev. J. P. Stuart will preach at 11 o'clock. At the regular evening service at 7:30 one of the visiting brethren will preach.

The program is an unusually interesting one and all who can do so should try to attend all the services.

C. C. McCHORD

His Work As Railroad Commissioner Is Reviewed and He Is Complimented.

(From Courier-Journal of Monday.)

C. C. McChord, of Springfield, Ky., yesterday was formally declared the nominee for State Railroad Commissioner from the Second Railroad Commission district of Kentucky by the Democratic Executive Committee of the district, composed of the following: J. Norton Fitch, of Nicholasville, chairman; Samuel T. Spaulding, of Lebanon; Isaac Hindman, of Louisville; W. A. Lee, of Owenton; Arthur B. Rouse, of Burlington, and J. F. Hawn, of Barbourville. Mr. McChord was notified formally of his nomination at The Seelbach yesterday afternoon following a meeting of the Executive Committee.

Monday was the last day for candidates to enter the race for the Railroad Commissioner, and the committee found that Mr. McChord was the only one who had formally entered and paid his entrance fee. Had there been other candidates, a primary was to have been held April 2. When the committee met yesterday, it not only declared Mr. McChord the nominee, but the primary was declared off.

Mr. McChord is nominated to succeed himself as a member of the Kentucky Railroad Commission, on which body he has served continuously as chairman since 1892, with the exception of four years from 1895 to 1899, when he was a member of the State Senate. Mr. McChord was appointed a member of Commission by Gov. Brown in 1892. The office of State Railroad Commissioner was made an elective one in 1895 by the new State Constitution.

His years of experience in dealing with the complexities of railroad problems in Kentucky have made Mr. McChord one of the wisest known State officials in the country. He is the author of the McChord Railroad Bill, under which the Railroad Commissioners are given power to make freight rates in Kentucky, and which has successfully stood the test of the Supreme Court. The McChord Bill is responsible for the reduction by one quarter of freight rates in the State, and placed Louisville on a par with Cincinnati, which had an advantage of 25 per cent in the matter of freight rates. In cases growing out of both of these reductions the State Railroad Commissioner has been enjoined, and Commissioner Stone will take part in the cases next month.

Mr. McChord is vice president of the National Association of Railroad Commissioners, the membership of which embraces the commissioners of thirty-three States. He is forty-five years old, and prior to his appointment by Gov. Brown he was Prosecuting Attorney of Washington county, and in which capacity he was serving his third term when he resigned to take his appointment.

Recently several of Mr. McChord's Louisville friends have urged him to take up the practice of law in Louisville in connection with the duties of his office, and it is believed that he will do so. By virtue and his knowledge of the railroad situation in Kentucky he is able qualified to represent the plaintiffs in railroad rate cases, and he also is credited with a wide knowledge of general corporation law.

By a bill passed at the last session of the Kentucky General Assembly the salary of chairman of the State Railroad Commission was increased from $2,000 to $3,000 a year, and those of the other members of the commission from $2,000 to $3,000 a year. In the event of Mr. McChord's re-election, it is believed he will again be chosen chairman of the commission.

keen, Announced the life of one who was to have her share In a world of joy and a world of care. She's here today, we have her love, Second only to that of God above, Tranquil peace rests on her face so fair, There is only a little silver in her hair As it parts above her eyes of heavenly blue.

With the dear mother love shining through. The occasion was bright and delightful, and Mrs. Yankey, who is strong and well, bearing the weight of her years so gracefully, was remembered with many good wishes and gifts of devotion from family and friends.

Death of Mrs. Ray.

Mrs. William E. Ray died at St. Joseph's hospital in Louisville last night at 11 o'clock from the effects of an operation for tumor. The operation was performed about one week ago, and she was thought to be doing nicely until two days ago when her condition began to alter.

The deceased was the wife of Mr. W. E. Ray, of the Pleasant Run neighborhood, one of the best known farmers in Washington county. She was a lovely woman, and her death is mourned by many people. Mrs. Ray was a devout member of the Bethlehem Baptist church, and was one of the best institutions most valuable workers. She was about fifty-one years old. Her maiden name was Foman, being a daughter of Isaac Foman, who was well known in this county.

Besides a husband the deceased leaves ten children, one brother and two sisters. To these sorrowing ones The Sun extends sympathy.

Funeral services will occur at Bethlehem to-morrow morning.

Judge Thurman's Charge.

Green County Record: Judge Thurman in his charge to the Grand Jury got down to business. Among other things he said, there is scarcely a crime committed in your midst that is not due to the violation of some of the minor laws, and if you will find indictments for the minor breaches of law, such as carrying deadly weapons and the illicit sale of whisky you will have made a long step toward the preventing of homicides. These minor violations lead to greater. Stop the carrying of deadly weapons and by so doing you prevent murder, stop the sale of whisky and you lessen the criminal docket. Whisky is the direct cause of a very large per cent of the crime and lawlessness of any community in which it is sold. And especially do I call your attention to the fact that the rigid enforcement of these offenses will save many a life. Another offense, said he, to which I call your attention is gambling among the higher classes. I don't know whether you have the gentleman poker player in Greensburg or not, I have never heard of it, but many towns have them. If there be, let the negro and the crap game go for the time and look after these poker players. More young men have been ruined by these upper class private poker rooms than in almost anything else. Young men who frequent these places either become so infatuated with it, or else the man at the head of it gets such control of them that they are made to misappropriate the money of their employer, forge checks and commit other crimes to get money to gamble on. In some instances they become the masters of the young men by causing them to do things by which to raise money, and then hold it over them and in that way force them to go deeper and do many dishonest things, until at last there is no other alternative for the young man but the loss of his position and disgrace from indiscretion, embezzlement and forgery. There are instances when to save them from the indignities, aged parents have been made to give up their homes to pay the son out. These are dangerous places, and if you can find proof of such a place a few indictments may save some promising young man. The sale of cigarettes was also prominently mentioned. The jury earnestly admonished to give this matter their attention, calling their attention to the many ways in which this law is violated in many places.

A Meeting of the A. S. of E. Locals of Washington County will Be Held Here Saturday Afternoon at 1 O'clock.

COMMITTED SUICIDE

Young Woman Ends Her Life at Willisburg.

Miss Mollie Skimmerhorn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Skimmerhorn, of Willisburg, committed suicide last Monday afternoon.

The young woman was employed in the family of Mr. Thomas Miller, and in the afternoon asked permission to go home. On the way home she stopped at Trent's store and bought a small quantity of carbolic acid. She then went to Wells Bros. store and purchased a tablet and pencil. From there she went direct to the home of her parents, and it is well known a farewell letter to members of her family. After the letter was finished she was seen to leave the house and go into the yard, where she was soon found in a dying condition. It was then discovered that she had swallowed about a half ounce of the deadly poison. Physicians were summoned, but it was impossible to save her life, and she died in great agony about 9 o'clock Monday night.

No cause is assigned for the rash act.

Wild Man In Garrard County.

Lexington, Ky., March 22.—Information has been received here that the people in the country around Buena Vista, a village in Garrard county, are much excited over the reports that a wild man has his haunts in the Kentucky river hills near that place. A party is being organized to explore a cave where the creature is believed to have his lair and attempt to capture him.

Jim Peters, a farm hand employed by S. D. Scott, postmaster at Buena Vista, while working in Bowman's woods, near High Grove, a short distance from Buena Vista, was attracted by the peculiar actions of his dog, which came running to him from a thicket near by, yelping and showing every evidence of extreme fright. A moment later, Peters says, a creature with the shape of a human being, followed the dog and approached within twenty yards of him. Peters says he was frightened to run. The apparition kept its eyes on the dog until asked what it was doing there, when it turned and disappeared in the woods. Peters says that the creature wore no clothes except a skin skirted about its loins. Its long black hair streamed down its back and breast in a matted mass, and covered the face, so that he could not see whether it had a beard or not. Its body was covered with a coat of soft, fuzzy black hair and its finger and toe nails were long and curved like talons.

Peters hurried home and told his employer, who to-day organized a party of the vicinity are afraid to leave their homes. The man is supposed to be an escaped prisoner or lunatic.

The County Candidate.

When the sap begins to rise and the geese begin to mate, we hear the gentle croon of the county candidate. Oh he's a jolly fellow and full of vain conceits, and sees a blossom friend in every man he meets. He asks about your family, your horses and your dogs, and shows a friendly interest in the children and the dogs. Oh! he's a jolly gentleman, as game as a lamb, as blithe as a meadow lark, as sleek as any clam. His prospects are the brightest and his chances they are sure and he spends his money freely and he helps the needy poor. He goes to church on Sunday and his pious traits appear, but when necessary he will set 'em up to beer. Oh! he's a sanguine buoyant dandy, the county candidate, he starts out early in the morning and stays out late. His patient wife unlocks the door, and a look of pain, she says, "You needn't try to lie to me, your leg's been pulled again."

THE SPARROW AND THE OWL.

THE SPARROW.

I "winged it" down to Uniontown one day last week to see Mr. Phil McIntire. He told me he was well-satisfied with his new home, but I noticed that he kept his eyes turned toward Washington county. My prediction is that he will be a citizen of this county again in two or three years. I will be glad to welcome him home. He may not love an English Sparrow, but his home was a hospitable one and I don't like to see a family like Mr. McIntire's move away.

Mr. Conrad Hertlein is entertaining his friends with stories of his trip to Germany. I have heard many people say that they never were as glad to see anybody as they were to see Conrad when he came home. He is a big-hearted man, and his acquaintances are all his friends.

The professional slanderer is usually a man who would not be believed upon oath. All sensible people recognize him as a common blackguard, and when his foul tongue begins to be heard, his utterances are "set down" as lies.

Whenever you feel like saying something mean about a man look into your own soul and see if there is not a cess-pool.

I witnessed a marriage in an adjoining county a few days ago. A couple came to town to get married. They came in a spring wagon, to which two small mules of the kicking variety were hitched, and immediately repaired to the County Clerk's office to procure a license. The young "groom-to-be," after searching every pocket in his trousers, his vest and his coat, sadly found that he was twenty-five cents short of the price of the license, which the Clerk refused to grant, remarking that it takes "long green" to make two hearts beat as one. The young fellow was puzzled; a tear came into his eye and he had a severe case of the "muffs." He dropped into a chair, doubled himself up like one afflicted with cholera morbus and said: "Sallie, let's go back home an' get married some other time; I'm sick, an' pa needs the mules." "I ain't a-goin' do no such a thing!" Sallie quickly and hotly replied, "an' if you don't git them license I'll box your jaws till you can't hear it thunder, an' I mean just what I say, too." This bit of speech from Sallie made the young man's predicament the more serious and she shifted uneasily in his chair and cast a furtive look at the County Judge. Presently his face grew brighter and he arose from the chair. Stepping around to where the Clerk was seated he asked: "Did you say that it took long green to git them papers?" "That's what I said," replied the amused Clerk. "Well," said the young hero, "I've a twist, or two over in the spring wagon, 'I'll give you them and a dollar and a quarter for them papers." The trade was made and the County Judge said the ceremony, after which the young couple repaired to the street. "Sallie," said the young man-afraid-of-his-wife, "I spect we'd better not take that weddin' tower over to the station on the cars, fer I ain't got no money." "Look-a-here, Sam," said Sallie, "that trip on the cars was one of the things I married you fer, an' I'm a-goin' too, so you hear me!" "Sallie, I spect pa wants them mules, an' if we don't git back home ma will be uneasy about me." But Sallie would not listen to his pleadings and told him if he didn't take her over to the next station she would bump him against the court house until his nose bled.

house until his nose bled.

It was very evident to the bystanders that Sam's canoe had struck another snag, and to help him out some one in the crowd said: "Go down to the depot this afternoon, and when the train comes in ride around the 'Y.'" The couple immediately started for the station, and there they waited for some time. Sam became impatient and asked the agent if he couldn't "send the cars word to hurry; me an' Sallie's got to git home; pa wants the mules." The agent got mad and threw a bucketful of cold water in Sam's face. This startled him, and he swallowed a lump of tobacco. The tobacco choked him and Sallie pounded him in the back until he thought she was mad, and he begged her to stop.

The train came in late in the afternoon, and Sam and Sallie made a rush for the coach. Seating themselves on the rear platform—side by side—they were ready for the wedding trip. The conductor saw the two, and procuring a large board, he went around to the opposite side of the coach and brought it down on the platform with a terrific force. "It had the desired effect," Sam yelled: "The b'ller to the engine done bust!" and he and Sallie ran neck and neck till they reached the spring wagon. A jerk of the line and a crack of the whip and the homeward journey was begun.

THE OWL.

My nervous system received such a shock while on duty at a certain place this county Saturday night that I was compelled to put myself under the care of a physician. I was sitting on a dead limb of a white oak tree in a graveyard. The moon had just risen and a ghastly appearance came over everything, the breezes in the tree tops were moaning like wounded hounds, and the old world seemed to be breathing contagion. I got frightened, not at any one thing in particular, and had fixed my wings to fly away, when I heard a voice saying: "I would like to bury that old to-night, wouldn't you, Sam?" I'll bet he's looking at us right now. This froze me. I was speechless-terror-stricken in every sense of the word. My feathers turned white in a second. Bury me! It was an awful thing to think about. I crawled up beneath a big bunch of leaves to avoid developments. They soon came. A tall fellow and a short fellow walked over to a lonely part of the cemetery—just a few steps behind me—and began to look for something. Directly the tall man picked up a woman's handkerchief, remarking "I have found it." Then, he said, "now, Sam, here's 50 cents, and you must never tell that you came with me to this place, for if you did she would break the engagement, for see my coming here, in the dead hour of night, after this little handkerchief will convince her that I am not afraid of ghosts, as is reported through the neighborhood. She told me she despised a coward, especially one who was afraid of spect and this is a way she had of testing my nerve. I will deliver this handkerchief to her to-night. Don't tell that you came with me."

Last Saturday night I heard a girl say that the young men of Washington county would not talk so much about girls to-day not knowing how to keep house if they would furnish a few more of the houses.

A man loses nothing by being kind. A fellow befriended me once and I kept his daughter from running off and getting married. I knocked a big apple off of a tree and it struck the girl in the head, causing her to have brain fever, from which she died.

I heard an amusing few a few nights ago between a Springfield boy and his sweetheart. It came up this way. He said that he thought Miss —, a visiting young lady, was very cute and pretty. His sweetheart took exception to this, saying that she thought the young lady was perfectly horrid. She also said that Johnnie —, who is noted as an ugly boy, was "such a handsome young fellow." "In fact," she said, "He is about the best looking boy I know." "Do you think it is better looking than I," asked her astonished sweetheart. "How ridiculous!" replied the young lady. "You will never see the day that you will be half so good looking and cute as Johnnie sweetheart told me to leave and his words was to be done—blindly, and he told his sweetheart that he was also joining the half moon. They made up in the usual way, and I left them cooing like doves from sunset.

Character of a Man's Beard.

"You can tell some of a man's habits and read some of his traits of character from his beard," said the old barber. "If a man spends his days at a desk beside a window his hair and beard will grow faster on the side toward the window. Plants and beards both flourish under the influence of sunlight. Why, one of my customers told the effects of the side light so pronounced that he changed his office desk to face the window. Another interesting fact is that, when a man is up early or works long hours, he needs a shave oftener than if he took the usual amount of sleep. That's because in being awake he keeps the vital processes of his body in greater activity than when asleep. The growth of the hair depends largely on the circulation of the blood, and the heart slows down when we sleep." —Kansas City Star.

Gratified.

Kentucky Advocate: The nomination of Hon. C. C. Chord for Railroad Commissioner from this district is received with a great deal of satisfaction by the Democrats of the district as well as the people generally all over the State. Mr. Chord has been a member of the Commission since its creation. He has made a close study of railroad conditions in Kentucky and various States of the Union and is considered to be the best posted and most efficient Railroad Commissioner in the country. It is fortunate for the State indeed that he is to be retained in a position that he has filled so acceptably, and it is creditable to the Democratic party that it is to be represented by a man so well informed and so capable.

Read This.

Harrodsburg Herald: Sears, Roebuck & Co. have recently made the statement that they will not fill grocery orders in the future because of the passage of the pure food law. In other words, it is a confession that they have been doing their customers in the past with adulterated concoctions called groceries, and now they must obey the law. Now that they can't sell you dope, from which they exacted a 20 cent profit, they want you to buy nothing. Only another proof that you should trade at home with merchants whom you know are not scheming to beat you out of 90 cents of every dollar you spend with them. Keep your money at home and eat undoped foods and be happy.

Health in the Canal Zone.

The high wages paid make it a mighty temptation to our young artisans to join the force of skilled workmen needed to construct the Panama Canal. Many are restrained however by the fear of fever and malaria. It is the knowledge of those who have used Electric Bitters, who go there without this fear, well knowing they are safe from malarious influence with Electric Bitters on hand. Cures blood poison too, biliousness, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Guaranteed by Hayden & Robertson, druggists. S. C.

ANENT CHEESES.

How to Keep Different Varieties Fresh and Palatable. Few housekeepers have any idea that special care should be taken in order to keep the best of the best of cheeses. Says the Boston Traveler: Most of them wrap it in a paper and lay it upon the pantry shelf, there to remain until it becomes too dry or moldy to be good. Different cheeses require different treatment.

Edam cheese is best kept in a cool, dry shelf. If one has a buffet in the kitchen, it will keep fresh for some time if placed there. Cheese dishes with glass or porcelain tops are apt to cause Edam cheese to sweat.

Roquefort cheese may be kept out of the window or in a cool closet in a jar, but should first be wrapped in paper tissue.

Camembert, Gorgonzola and Brie should be treated in the same way, but must be brought in some time before they are to be used, as the cold air will make them too dry to serve immediately.

American cheese should be wrapped in several thicknesses of paper and kept on the lower shelf in the refrigerator or in the fresh air food chest.

How to Drive a Well.

In many sections of the country where there is a gravelly substratum the obtaining of water is a comparatively simple matter by means of a driven well. The farmer who has a well of this kind is well off. A section of pipe to convenient size being laid and a quarter is fitted with a point of iron. This pipe is bored full of holes which are covered with a brass gauge. The point is driven into the ground by a sledge hammer, and five foot sections of galvanized iron pipe are joined to it as it is driven into the ground. Frequent tests are made with a pitcher pump to discover when water has been reached. This method of obtaining water is not altogether satisfactory, because from the very nature of things the water has to be done blindly, and very often one is obliged to give up entirely after having driven twenty or thirty feet of pipe through quicksand from which no water can be obtained.

The Poorest Man.

The poorest man on earth may not be begging bread from door to door, or sitting in some lonely spot, neglected, ragged and footless. The poorest man on earth may gaze across wide acres of his own. Another gains in many ways. Or he may be a tyrant, widely known. The poorest man on earth may lead a mighty army to success. And know not what it is to need. When those above are pitiless. The poorest man on earth may be a master of his fellow men. He may send fleets of ships to sea. Whose like shall not be seen again. The poorest man on earth is one who scoffs at love and cannot know how little favors kindly done. May help to smooth the way we go. The poorest man has never guessed how lovers learn, and never known the joy of clasping to his breast. The child that is his very own. —S. E. Kiser.

Old Times, Old Friends, Old Love.

There are no days like the good old days. When we were youthful! When humankind were poor of mind. And speech and deeds were truthful; Byfollies for aye and naught! Became man's ruling passion. And before each dame and maid became slave the tyrant fashion! There are no girls like the good old girls. Against the world I'd stake 'em! As buxom and smart, and clean of heart As the Lord knew how to make 'em! They were rich in spirit and common sense. And they all supportin'; They could bake and brew, and had taught school too. And they made such lively courtin'!

There are no boys like the good old boys— When we were boys together! When the grass was sweet to the brown bare feet That dimpled the laughing heather: When the peewee sang to the Summer down Of the bee in the willow clover, Or over by the millie white-poor-will Echoed his night song over. There is no love like the good old love— The love that mother gave us! We're old, old men, yet we pine again For that precious grace—God gave us! So we dream and dream of the good old times. And our hearts grow tender, fonder, As those dear old dreams bring soothing, healing, heaven away off yonder. —Eugene Field.

"Ever a Song Somewhere."

There is ever a song somewhere, my dear, There is ever something that sings Over the hills and down the valleys. There's the song of the lark when the skies are clear. And the song of the thrush when the skies are gray. The sunshine shimmers across the orchard, And the bluebird thrills in the grain; And in and out, when the eaves drip The swallows are twittering ceaselessly. There is ever a song somewhere, my dear, Be the skies above dark or fair; There is ever a song that our hearts may hear. There's ever a song somewhere, my dear— There is ever a song somewhere! There is ever a song somewhere, my dear. In the midnight black or the midday blue; The robin pipes when the sun is here, And the cricket chirrups the whole night through; The birds may blow and the fruit may grow, And the autumn leaves drop crisp and brown. But there's ever the sun or the rain or the snow, There's ever a song somewhere, my dear. —James Whitcomb Riley.

Ingersoll's Tribute to Woman.

"It takes a hundred men to make an encampment, but one woman can make a home. I not only admire woman as the most beautiful object ever created, but I reverence her as the redeemed glory of humanity, the sanctuary of the virtues, the pledge of all perfect qualities of heart and head. It is because women are so much better than men that their faults are considered greater. The one thing in this world that is constant is the peak that rises above the clouds, the one window in which the light burns forever, the one star that darkness cannot quench, is a woman's love. It rises to the greatest heights, it is the lowest depths, it forgives the most cruel injuries. A woman's love is the perfume of the earth. This is the real love that subdues the earth; the love that has wrought all miracles of art; that gives us music all the way from the cradle song to the grand closing symphony that bears the soul away on wings of fire. A love that is greater than power, sweeter than life and stronger than death."

Lost and Found.

Lost, between 9:30 p. m., yesterday and noon to-day, a bijous attack, with nausea and sick headache. This loss was occasioned by finding at Hayden & Robertson's drug store a box of Dr. King's Life Pills, the guaranteed cure for biliousness, malaria and jaundice. —Zec.

Catchy Words of American Make.

(From the Hartford Herald.)

The manufacturing instinct of the American has not been confined to the material things of life. When he has needed a word he has made it, just as he has invariably made other things that he wanted. Sometimes he grafted the bud of his thought on some foreign words and acclimated them, and sometimes he evidenced a glorious amount of independence and made his words, as the world was made, "out of nothing."

Have you ever heard the reason why the American Government is called "Uncle Sam"? It was because one Samuel Wilson, Government Inspector of beef and pork at Troy, N. Y., in 1812, had a way of marking his barrels with his own initials and "U. S.," meaning United States. A workman, who was something of a wag, saw the letters, and facetiously remarked that he supposed they stood for "Uncle Sam." The joke was retold and retold until it became a common saying, and the general Government has been so nicknamed for nearly a hundred years.

Over a century ago the United States was also known to England and other foreign countries as "Brother Jonathan." Why? Because, George Washington was very greatly influenced by the opinions of Jonathan Turnbull, and had a way of saying: "Well, I must consult Brother Jonathan" before he made decisions. The term became local and then drifted to its general use.

Tammany, the name adopted by a Democratic club in New York in 1871, had been used for nearly a hundred years. It was the anglicization of the name of wise old Tamam, an Indian chief who lived in Pennsylvania, and whose name had been borrowed by continental troops when they were casting about for an American saint to flaunt in the face of the British enemy, who had "St. George" on their banners.

"Skedaddle" was bequeathed to the American vocabulary by a war correspondent from the London Times, who came over to report the Battle of Bull Run. He watched the very hurried and undignified manner in which the Union soldiers left the field, and applied to this route the term skedaddle.

Elbridge Gerry, of Massachusetts, restricted the State to his own advantage in 1811, and when someone looked at the new district and remarked that it looked for all the world like a salamander, some one else replied: "Better say a Gerry-mander." And so the name was born and has been kept to represent all such political redistricting.

Bumcome county, N. C., has lent its name to the country's vocabulary and is a synonym for hypocritical enthusiasm, not because there is a characteristic of the people of that section, but because many years ago a member of Congress from Bumcome county persisted in making a speech when the general exodus of the members showed they didn't want to hear it. When it was intimated that he might as well stop, he replied: "Never mind, I'm talking to Bumcome." The word in its new sense was first applied to the speeches that were made in Congress for the express purpose of being sent home to a listening constituents, and later received its present application.

Another purely American term is "O. K." It was derived from the words Aux Cayes, from which place the best tobacco and rum were brought over a century ago. The pronunciation was O. K., and brevity-loving Americans immediately took the letters as a mark of endorsing other things that were as satisfactory as the tobacco and rum from Aux Cayes.

Barbecue, a method of preparing meat that has lent its name to all-day picnics in the South, it is said to be from the French barbe-a-queue "from snout to tail." Others claim that America borrowed the name from the Indians of Guiana, who grilled their meats on a wooden frame called barbecue. The Southerners are willing to accept either origin of the word, so long as the art of preparing meat in this manner is not forgotten.

The name "Polly" for a parrot was brought from New Orleans by early flatboatmen, who went from the Cumberland and Ohio countries down the Mississippi to sell their produce. They saw these tropical birds swinging in front of Louisiana homes, and heard the owners call to the bird "parle, parle," meaning "talk, talk." When the travelers returned home and told of the strange birds they called them "pollies."

The word schooner, as applied to a sailing vessel, came from New England, where it was coined by a Gloucester boatman in 1713. A new vessel was launched, and one of the workmen cried out in great admiration: "See how she scoons," meaning skimming along. The owner grasped the word and called the boat a "scooner" or "schooner," as it is now spelled.

The Spaniards loaned many words to the vocabularies of settlers in the Southwest. The first gold discovery in California was called a bonanza, from the Spanish word meaning "good-luck." Broncho is Spanish-American for a mustang, but broncho-busting is purely American in its origin and application. Cayuse is also Spanish, as is calaboose, a provincialism for the town lock-up. Chaparral, the only vegetation on the long stretches of desert region in the West, gets its name from the same land that gave pueblo, sombrero and the lariat to this language. Guerilla is also of Spanish origin.

The black mammy of the South will bake you a corn "dodger" at your request and know you are Southern-born. The impression will be the same if you ask for pone. The latter word is of pure Indian manufacture, coming direct from the village of Powhatan himself, who called it "pohn" when speaking to the men of Capt. Smith's party. Mugwump is another Indian word which has been removed from its primitive dignity. It means a chief among the old Algonquins. Elliott used it in his Indian Bible as a synonym for censor or captain. Political parties borrowed it in 1872 as a term of derision for Republicans who had deserted to vindicate certain principles. Whiggycorn is the name applied by Indian hunters and American trappers to the written permission to hunt game in the Northwest. The origin of the name is unknown. It sounds as if it had been fathered by a jag.

A Hint to Travelers.
While in Suffolk, Va., Henry Croil, Jr., proprietor of the Beaverfoot, Mich Hardware Co., was taken very sick with bowel trouble. A traveling salesman from Saginaw, Mich., advised him to get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did. "It soon cured me, and I take pleasure in recommending it," he says. No one should leave home on a journey without a bottle of this remedy. It is almost sure to be needed, and is not obtainable while on steamships or cars. Sold by every reliable dealer in the Blue Grass.

Do Not Neglect a Bad Cold.
Never allow a cold to take its course. Too often at this season of the year its course is toward pneumonia. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will promptly cure your cold and counteract any tendency in this direction. There is nothing better for acute throat and lung troubles. For sale by every reliable dealer in the Blue Grass.

"Stuck" It To Him.
LaRue Herald: We like the manner in which Hardin county has started out as a local option county. Mr. Sommers editor of the News, recently made the statement that for a week after the saloons were closed there was not a single drunken man found on the street. The first man that was seen to be drunk was taken before the court and made to tell where he got his whisky with the result that Geo. Upton was arrested on the charge of selling whisky without license, was given three months in jail and fined fifty dollars. At the close of his term, of imprisonment he will be turned over to the Federal authorities and will be tried in the Federal court for violation of the Federal laws and will probably be sent to Federal prison. This looks like a rocky road to travel but the more rocks there are on the road the fewer there are who will travel it. If LaRue county would adopt the plan of exhausting their local legal resources and then turn the prisoners over to the Federal authorities, it will have a fine effect. There are parties in the town now dabbling in whisky who would not dare do so if they only thought that their case would be called in that court where punishment is certain and severe. Give them all a chance at the Federal court.

To Whomsoever Shall Marry
One of His Daughters.

Spokane, Wash., March 17.—"I will give a wedding present of $20,000 to each of my three daughters the day they are married to husbands satisfactory to me." Daniel Sullivan, of Pravel, Wash., who garnered a fortune of $250,000 of his 1,000 acre domain in the Sanish flats out belt, west of Spokane, makes the foregoing announcement. Farmer Sullivan's trio of daughters range from 25 to 18 years of age. They are comely, well educated and sprightly, but all have an impediment in their speech. Mary is the oldest, the second being Nelly, 21 years of age, while Kate, the youngest, has just passed her 18th birthday. "The fact that my girls have defects in their speech may handicap them in the race for husbands of the right sort," Mr. Sullivan said. For that reason I have resolved that the men who take them as their wives shall be rewarded. My girls shall have everything their hearts desire."

Nervous Worn-Out

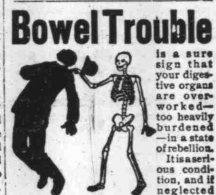

If you are in this condition, your nerve force is weak—the power is giving out, the organs of your body have "dowed up," and do their work imperfectly. This failure to do the work required, clogs the system and brings distress and disease. When the nerves are weak the heart is unable to pump the life-giving blood through your veins; the stomach fails to digest food; the kidneys lack power to filter impurities from the blood, and the poisonous waste remains in the system to breed disease. Nerve energy must be restored. Dr. Miles' Nerveine will do it, because it strengthens the nerves; it is a nerve medicine and tonic, that rebuilds the entire nervous system.

"Several years ago I was all broken down. I was nervous, worn-out, could not sleep, and was in constant pain. I declared for months, and finally the doctor said he could do nothing for me. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nerveine, and I became strong and healthy, and now wish to recommend it to all who are suffering from nervousness."

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Rogers Gore is a candidate for State Senator from the fifteenth Senatorial District, composed of Marion, Washington and Taylor counties, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

LETTERS FROM FRIENDS.

Letter from the Editor-in-Chief of the Dayton, Ohio, Daily News.

Dayton, Ohio, March 23, 1907.—Mr. J. Rogers Gore, Springfield, Ky.—My Dear Boy—I see from the Kentucky papers that you will be nominated for the state senate in your district. A few years ago I would have been sorry to hear this, for it might not have been possible for you to have been of service to your district. I refer to the days when good, honest men were in the minority in the legislatures of this country.

At this time, however, when a general reform wave is sweeping over the country, when the masses are demanding that their representatives represent them, when there is a crying demand for purity and integrity in politics as well as in business, and when it is seen that the safety of the country lies in a fearless independence, you can be of great benefit to your district and therefore to yourself. No man is of any benefit to himself unless he is of benefit to others.

I have tried to keep up with your career since the "glad, wild days" when you came into the printing office to work under me, and I assure you that it has afforded me a great deal of pleasure to find you lined up on the side of right in so many instances. There has never been a doubt in my mind as to your ultimate success. If your district does not want you for senator I shall think all the less of the district, but not the less of you. I sincerely trust that you will not lay aside your newspaper career in this instance, for I assure you that whatever the disgruntled may say, the fact remains that the press of this country is running this country to the extent that it is preaching sound doctrine. I have such implicit faith in the integrity and the wisdom of the people that I believe the man who, day after day, or week after week, lays before the people the uncolored facts concerning current questions, is doing more for the country than any other man.

With implicit confidence in you, and knowing that you will never weaken and leave the high ground upon which you stand, I am,

Very respectfully,
GEO. F. BURBA.

Letter from Congressman Smith

Hodgenville, Ky., March 25, 1907.—J. Rogers Gore, Esq., Springfield, Ky. My Dear Rogers:—I have just read the announcement of your nomination for Senator from your district and I write to congratulate you upon your success. The position of Senator is not only a very dignified but a very important one and it is a great compliment to any citizen to be chosen and called to this high trust.

I am very much pleased to know that during your brief residence among the good people of Washington county you have so established yourself in their confidence and esteem as to cause them to confer this honor. I have no doubt you will be easily elected and make your splendid constituents a faithful, patriotic Senator. With kindest regards I am,

Your friend,
D. H. SMITH.

Letter from Superintendent Schools of Breckinridge County.

Hartshurst, Ky., March 22, 1907.—Dear Rogers:—Glad you're to be in politics, and politics is to be congratulated upon your getting into the fray. You'll win of course, and be in the next legislature. Remember the schools! And compulsory laws need your aid.

We're all glad, and the boys are rejoicing to see that you will win the nomination without a struggle.

Yours,
JOEL H. PILE.

Letter from Circuit Clerk of Breckinridge County.

Hartshurst, Ky., March 21, 1907.—Rogers Gore, Esq., Springfield, Ky. Dear Gore:—I notice you will receive the nomination for the Senate from your district. I congratulate you. We are for you over here in Breckinridge and wish we could vote for you.

Yours etc.,
T. J. MOORE.

A Humane Appeal.

A humane citizen of Richmond, Ind., Mr. U. D. Williams, 107 West Main St., says: "I appeal to all persons with weak lungs to take Dr. King's New Discovery, the only remedy that has helped me and fully comes up to the proprietor's recommendation." It saves more lives than all other throat and lung remedies put together. Used as a cough and cold cure the world over. Cures asthma, bronchitis, whooping cough, croup, quinsy hoarseness, and phthisis, stops hemorrhages of the lungs and builds them up. Guaranteed at Hayden & Robertson's drug store. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

BLINCOE.

The constant chirping of birds and the trees that are putting forth their beautiful foliage makes us know that spring is here.

Miss Louette Bunette will go to Louisville Saturday to be the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. B. Humphry.

Miss Mary Edelen, of St. Rose neighborhood, spent last week with her brother, Mr. W. K. Edelen.

Miss Florence Fields will go to Louisville this week to spend a few days with her sister, Mrs. Alina Hays.

The bans of matrimony were announced here Sunday for the second time between Mr. Hall Symson and Miss Claude Downs. The marriage will take place Thursday, April 2nd.

Poultry Raising Pays.

Farmers are coming to realize that poultry raising is one of the best paying lines in their business. Statistics show that the eggs sold alone, pay the farmer more money than the output of corn or wheat. Now is the time of year to feed your fowls a good tonic. Remember that only healthy hens lay eggs. R4-11-44 fed to your fowls two or three times a week wards off diseases, for roup, cholera, gapes and limberneck; there is nothing better. If your chickens are sick, give each chicken three to five drops two or three times a day, as a preventive of disease, give one to three drops to each fowl in the feed two or three times a week. Turkeys being more delicate should be fed only one to three drops at a feed.

Can you afford to loose your chickens when R4-11-44 is guaranteed by your druggist to give satisfaction or your money will be refunded. Ask Mr. Hayden.

We extend to you a cordial invitation to enjoy our advanced showing of

FIRE ALARM.—An alarm of fire last Friday evening caused considerable excitement in Springfield. A lamp in an upstairs room in the residence of Mr. M. L. Searcy exploded, and for a time it looked like a serious fire would result. However, the flames were extinguished before the fire department arrived.

WIRE YOUR HOUSES.—During the next 90 days The Springfield Water and Electric Light Company will wire houses at cost of labor and material.
Guard against fires by using electric lights. The new plant will soon be in operation and the company will furnish the very best of lights.

S. M. Campbell reports county court day as among the duller court days for Springfield. Twenty or twenty-five mules were on the market but did not sell. Six yearlings, two mares and four horses were offered and took down at $85.50 per head. One pair work mare mules, ages 3 and 5, sold for $336. Hogs were considered at least 20 per cent. off from 30 days ago; milk cows sold at from $20 to $25 per head.

A meeting of the A. S. of E. Locals of Washington county will be held in Springfield next Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Any district that has not elected its member on the county Board, should do so at once, and have him attend this meeting next Saturday.
The meeting will be an important one.

Keep On Organizing.

Up-to-date Farming: The tobacco raisers have already accomplished a wonderful work, but it is nothing in comparison to what can be done by a united effort. The tobacco farmers of the whole nation can get together and refuse to sell a pound of tobacco to the trusts. When they do this there will be hundreds of independent manufacturers ready to start into business. Even if there were no independent buyers it would be an easy matter for the farmers to start factories of their own.
They can get plenty of money on their tobacco to build buildings, and union tobacco workers would be only too glad to go in with them and work the tobacco up. Then as the farmer and the labor union people are the chief users of tobacco there is no reason why the factories could not get ready sale for all their products at fair prices, and the buyers would feel that they were getting good clean tobacco and that the money they paid for it was going to the people who had earned it. It will need some nerve and some brain work to accomplish all this, but so far the tobacco farmers have shown no lack of these qualities. It was no easy matter for the trusts of this country to accomplish what they have, and it took men with courage and with foresight to do it. It will require the same qualities in your leaders now, and you must stand by them if you expect to win out.
Don't get jealous because some other man makes remarkable strides as leaders, for some one must go ahead, and as long as your leaders are going in the right direction help them along. At the same time watch everybody. It will not hurt an honest man to be watched. In fact he wants you to keep an eye on him in order that you may see how well he is doing.

The Weaver's Knot.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1904, by Frank H. Sweet.

"O, dear! I can't do it! I can't. I've been tryin' a whole week now, an' I ain't no nearer than when I started. I might as well give up tryin' an' go back. 'Tain't in me."

There was a pitiful despair in the speaker's voice, and the long, lean face looked so woebegone as to be almost grotesque. But the eyes were beautiful—beautiful and pathetic, like the eyes of a child, when overworked or mountain pleases when aged and brought from its solitude—large, full, open, hazy eyes, looking out with frightened uncertainty upon new things. Joe glanced into them and checked the laugh which had bubbled as far as his lips, for the cause of the despair was clear, the trying of a weaver's knot.

"Oh, well, Melindy," she said reassuringly, "I guess you'll get it all right in time. Most weavers have trouble at first. I know I did. That was the hardest kind in the world till you learn how; then it's the easiest. See?" And she passed her fingers across a thread, apparently just touching it, and there was a knot. Melindy looked on admiringly, despairingly.

"It's the fingers," she declared cheerfully. "Yours is soft an' smooth an' long, an' mine—" She held up her big, worn hands as more eloquent than words, and Joe nodded an assent.

"Yes, fingers," she repeated, "but you'll wear smooth in time. I don't know," skeptically, "my fingers are pretty ugly, but your wife's 'bout as clumsy. I ain't a bit of a finger tip, an' they're what tie the knots. Mine's been all roughed up choppin' down trees in the woods an' handle the good drivin' cattle an' peelin' tankard an' things like that. The inside of 'em is almost hard as a bone. I don't believe they ever can get soft ag'in, to have feelin' like yours, ought to be stayed back in the woods."

"But you said you couldn't earn over a dollar a week there last year," retorted Joe, "and here you can make five or six after you learn how to weave. I'm making that now and sometimes more. You want to do a lot of things for the brothers and sisters you're being telling me about and for your sick mother. If you give up, you'll have to give that up too."

"If there was a chance, the least bit of a chance, I'd never give up," said Melindy, a flush coming to her lean face. "But I can't see how there is. Pa an' me once chopped in the woods all winter to pay a sickness bill o' ma's. I worked just as long every day as he did an' got the meazles, an' we didn't give up till very last cent was paid. Our folks don't give up. That's why I've stuck to this knot a whole week, when I know it won't no use at the end of the first day. It's jest wastin' your time an' my time, an' the only thing is for me to go back home."

There was no break in the voice now, but Joe felt vaguely that a tragedy lay behind the words, deeper than she could understand. Involuntarily her hand fell upon the big, rough one so softly.

"Just you try it a few more days, Melindy," she advised. "Folks never know what they can do till it comes. They think they can't, it's no use, and they won't try any more, and then

"I'm afraid so. In the end we shall have to put in steam power. I suppose, though, that will be more expensive than our little mill warrants."

They walked on to the end of the dam and leaned against the log frame of the water gate. Fifteen minutes passed. The superintendent uttered a wondering exclamation and leaned forward, peering down at the water.

"Great Scott," he exclaimed, "four inches of water since we've been standing here! That's seven inches and plenty enough to keep us going till 9 o'clock. And look yonder up the stream! There's a regular freshet coming down! What it means, you don't know. It's a cloud in the sky, so it isn't a cloud-burst. But never mind, though. I know what it means."

"Sassy. It means a full day's work for tomorrow and the next day and maybe for the next. Excuse me now, sir. You can stay and watch the phenomenon if you like. I must run and get that mill started."

Twenty minutes later the owner was still standing there, beaming, but perplexed. Then he saw a girl coming toward him with a wreath over her shoulder, her hands soiled and her face red from recent exertion.

"Eh? The water comin' on?" she asked anxiously.

"Fine," he smiled, "but I cannot understand the reason, only the result. I hope it will keep on like this for awhile."

"I'll keep on pretty well, but not like this," she answered in a matter of fact voice. "I guess the water'll come down 'bout twice as fast as it did before, an' it'll come pretty steady."

He looked at her in amazement.

"What you know where it comes from?" he exclaimed.

"Yes, it's just a pond I tapped," she answered. "I was out early this mornin' went clear round the pond. It covers about five or six acres, I guess, an' on the other side there's a brook most as big as this that runs off into a camp. An' I didn't see any place where the water ran in. That made me know the pond was full of spring water, where the water boils up pretty fast. But I didn't think any special till I got back to this stream an' sat down. Then I noticed water tricklin' in, and that made me know the pond was higher, an' I got up an' looked round. Then I come for the above."

"And you got through?" he asked, intensely interested.

She nodded. "Twa'n'ten morn' ten feet. I commenced at the river an' got 'bout three or four feet deep till I got

"The water supply was a constant stream as inefficient as the rest of the mill outfit. During seven months of the year it did all that could be asked, and the mill ran full time, but through the winter, when little rain fell and there was no snow to melt, the stream often shrank to a thin thread, and then the great water wheel had to be revolved until the stream rose a few inches, when it would start again and run for an hour or so and then stop for the water once more to rise."

During Melindy's first week the mill had made full time, for there had been rains, but the day after her talk with Joe this temporary supply had been exhausted, and the stream commenced to shrink. When they went out to dinner, Joe cast an anxious glance at the mill race, and then he turned to Melindy.

"You've been here long enough to see what hands I do."

near the pond, then tapped through. An' I got pretty wet an' muddy," she finished, laughing. "I guess I'd better run to the boardin' house an' clean up 'fore I go in the mill."

"And you cut through," he repeated. "Strange that you should discover such a thing, and we never thought of it in all the years we've been here. I've hunted around that post a hundred times, I suppose, and never thought of there being any difference in the level of the water."

"Oh, it was just one o' them things that happens," she answered carelessly. "I set right where the water trickled down, an' I was thinkin' 'bout the mill stoppin' for water. I could help the rest if I set down ten feet off. I'd never have thought, an' I might 'a' walked a hundred times round the mill stoppin' for water. But if I had I'd send some men up an' dig that ditch twice as deep. It would let the water in better. An' I'd stop up the boardin' house side. Then you'd have the whole thing."

"I'll do it at once," he said quickly, "and thank you for the suggestion. Another advantage, we'll save a lot of money in return for all this. I don't believe you realize what that water means to us."

Her face flushed. "If that means give me something," she answered softly. "I guess you'd better not study over it any more. Back where I came from we don't have folks give us anything, an' my work would 'a' fetched less 'n 5 cents."

When she returned to the mill, Joe met her with sober face.

"The overseer's been here talking to me," she said hesitatingly, "and—and he doesn't seem to think it's any use for you to keep on at the knot. He wants me to take on another girl to show. I'm awfully sorry, Melindy."

But Melindy did not seem in the least discouraged.

"I've known it since the first day," she returned composedly, "but you wanted me to keep on tryin'. I'll save both of us wastin' more time."

As she was turning away the overseer came hurrying toward her, embarrassed and apologetic.

"You haven't told her yet?" he asked of Joe. Then, glancing at her face: "Yes, I see you have. Well, it was all a big mistake what I said. I've just been talking with the superintendent. We want Miss Melindy to take a job as spinnin'."

"As a gift?" asked Melindy coldly.

"No," eagerly, "as real, needed help. You've been here long enough to see what the spare hands have to do. You're stronger than any girl in here and can do the work of a man. There'll be wares and cuts of cloth to carry and all kinds of do. Good land, there'll be work enough! We'll pay $4 a week at first. Will you stay?"

"Yes, please do, Melindy," urged Joe.

Melindy looked from one to the other doubtfully; then her face cleared.

"Yes, I'll stay," she answered. "There's plenty of work I can do. I've seen that. I guess I can earn the money."

Three months later she came to Joe one morning, her face radiant. "See, Joe," she breathed, "I—I can do it. I can get a loom an' weave. See! And she took a thread and passed her fingers over it, and, behold, there was a weaver's knot!

A Monster Carpet.

A notable Axminster carpet has just been completed at the Royal carpet factory, Wilton, for a well known London club. It is entirely hand made, and although woven in one piece, measures over sixty-two feet in length and thirty-three feet in breadth. An order for the carpet was given by the club, and the carpet was to be especially erected to make it, and thirteen workers were continuously engaged for more than four months in its manufacture.—London Chronicle.

ADVICE ON SLEEPING.

How to Secure the Most Perfect Rest.

During childhood and exhaustive states too much sleep is rarely possible. For those who are afflicted with too much sleep is often distinctly hurtful, says Popular Science Monthly.

The action of narcotics presents none of the characteristics of over-sleep, except the temporary arrest of consciousness; hence narcotics is not true sleep.

The best position to assume in sleep, to invite the least disturbance of the functions of the great organs is on the abdomen or nearly so. Many obscure forms of digestive and circulatory disorders may have been initiated in infancy through lying too long upon the back.

To secure the most perfect repose the temperature of all parts should be equalized before retiring. Cold feet induce sleep in securing sleep, and it is then almost impossible to get up without delay to overrule the stomach before retiring. This disturbs sleep almost as much as hunger, but moderate eating and drinking is not hurtful and is often salutary.

Body clothing at night should be loose, not dense, permitting the ready escape of air, and the clothing should be too close of texture, blankets being preferable to dense "comfortables" and "trucks" in too close of texture. Air should be allowed to pass occasionally under the sheets at least as one turns about more or less freely.

Early rising is a salutary custom, especially when the day comes early, not otherwise. More sleep is required in winter than in summer. The best sleep is had during the hours of darkness.

The sleeping room should be cool, abundant air being always admitted. This should not be interpreted to mean that the room may safely remain intensely cold.

How to Care For One's Hands.

The manner of washing and wiping one's hands has much to do with their general condition and even with the shape of the finger tips. These can be helped to taper if each finger is wiped separately by taking the towel between thumb and forefinger of the other hand and pressing each finger at the side, beginning at the nail and rubbing down to the palm. This, after a long time, will affect their shape, says a writer in the New York Post.

The common way of wiping by passing a towel over the hands, rubbing from the palms down to the finger tips, is a mistake and will thicken the flesh about the nails. Wet, chapped nails are essential, and unfortunately few persons have them naturally. Many are made worse, though, by the way they are dried, and, like the fingers, they may be improved in wiping. Each should always be dried separately by pressing from the top of the nail down to the base, which keeps constantly pressing back the cuticle from the nail. It takes only a couple of days to get the fingers into the way each time they are wet, and it is more than worth while. Another aid is to rub cold cream over the nails on the hand to be used only just once in the space between cuticle and base of the nail. This will not rub off on the bedding and will prevent the cuticle from hardening.

How to Clean the Teeth.

The proper way to cleanse the teeth is to brush from the gums downward for the upper teeth and from the gums upward for the lower teeth. By this method the bristles go between the teeth as well as over the front and sides. Remember that the inside of the teeth requires more careful cleansing than the outside, which shows. The most important cleansing of the day is the one which takes place before going to bed. No vestige of food should be allowed to cling to a tooth during the night, as this induces decay. To keep the teeth in perfect condition they should be cleaned after each meal.

Any acid like vinegar will dissolve the lime of the teeth and destroy their solidity. A pleasant mouth wash when the mouth is at all sore is made by shaking up a few drops of tincture of myrrh in a little warm water. It is also useful for sweetening the breath.

How to Stretch Rightly.

One of the secrets of perfectly laundered garments is in the stretching, says the Brown Book. Always turn garments wrong side out before putting them in the starch, rub and clap the starch well through, but do not let a bit of it run upon the right side. This materials should not be starched at all but should be dipped into gum water made of white gum arabic. Especial care must be given to stretching the garments, as they cannot stand the denaturing which thicker materials are often treated to.

How to Treat Blisters.

In the treatment of contusions where there is extensive discoloration of the skin, the oil can be freely applied without rubbing the discoloration will quickly disappear. Absorbent cotton may be soaked in the oil and applied to the sore. It is broken a little boric acid should be applied over the abrasion. A black eye thus treated can be rendered normal in a few days, especially if the oil be applied warm.

How to Make Cloth Waterproof.

Take a pound of alum and sugar of lead each half an ounce and stir them into a gallon of rain water, and when the mixture is clear pour off the upper liquid. It is then ready for use. Carefully brush, then dry and press it. The cloth will be unharmed in color and texture and will stand any amount of rain to which you are likely to be exposed.

WILDCAT FOR A PET.

Strange Playmate of Two Little Girls.

How would you like to have a real live wildcat for a pet? This is what little Elsie Stearns, six months old, and Helen Stearns, aged nine, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Stearns of Pasadena, Cal., regard as their dearest treasure.

They would rather play with this big California wildcat than with their smaller domestic cats, and he is just as good natured as any of the rest too. Bengal is his name, and he looks the part, for his marking is very similar to a Bengal tiger's. He is a beautiful animal, about three and one-half feet long and very heavy. His fur is soft and thick, and it is with this soft fur that the round faced baby loves best to play.

He was caught when three months old in the wilds of the San Bernardino mountains and was introduced to a hunter at that age by Mr. Stearns. He has been with the family since that time. He was put with several small animals, kittens and grew up and played with these. He used to roam the house and jump on tables and bookcases, just as other kittens, but he has grown too large for that now, and they are obliged to keep him in the open, for in his playfulness he might break ornaments and dishes.

He is devoted to the children. He will lick the baby's hand and face and let her play with him just as roughly as she wishes, with never a growl or sound, and he is also fond of little Miss Helen. He likes women and children generally, but does not care for men.

He knows instinctively his natural enemies, however, and is ready to protect himself. He does not like dogs, and not very long ago a small dog ventured into his kennel and was thrown out and summarily killed with one stroke by the powerful cat.

The dogs belonging to the Stearns family, however, are exempt from this treatment. He does not go near them, but now and then runs up and gives them a nip, as if to say, "Now will you be good?"

HUSBAND ACTS LIKE SNAKE.

Misses in the Night, Says Wife, Who Wins $1,438 Alimony.

According to his wife's story in court the other day, Lewis Sunderlin, a Rochester jeweler, had all the pins made for their son's creation, for uniforms and newspaper obituaries and seemed to take a good deal of pleasure in detailing them to her.

He had found out the cost of cremation and told her at breakfast one morning that he planned bringing a coffin to the house, so that he could get into it and see how it looked. He offered to do the same for her, she said, and agreed to write a two column obituary notice for her, as he had done for himself.

"In the middle of the night," she added, "he would get up and scream and

BABE FELL FROM ARMS

Of Its Dead Mother, Curt Jett's Relative, Into Scalding Water, Dying.

Ashland, Ky.—When Mrs. Levi Jett, relative of Curtis Jett, of Breathitt county feud fame, was bathing her infant she suddenly was seized with a pain in the head, it is said, and fell dead. The babe fell from the lifeline arms of its mother into a tub of water and was scalded to death. In the opinion of the coroner there are suspicious circumstances attending the case, and he, with the county authorities, will make an investigation at once.

FOR COL. GAINES

A $2,000 Verdict Is Given Against Editor W. F. Walton.

Lawrenceburg, Ky.—In the case of Col. Noel Gaines against Editor W. F. Walton for $25,000 damages for alleged libel, the jury returned a verdict for $2,000 in behalf of the plaintiff. A new trial will be asked for during the term, and if the motion is overruled an appeal will be taken to the appellate court.

Treasure Is Unearthed.

Whitesburg, Ky.—After a search extending over two years, Mrs. Mary Jane Mullins, aged 60 years, unearthed a pot containing $4,000 in gold and silver in an abandoned lot on the farm of her father, the late Benjamin O. Mullins, of Letcher county. The father died 20 years ago, leaving at least $10,000, it is said, somewhere on the farm. Mrs. Mullins will continue to search for the remaining $4,000. In the find are some valuable old coins.

DISMISSAL OF CORPORATIONS. Claim For Coal Lands Granted With Cheers By the Mountaineers.

Sergeant, Ky.—After exhaustive arguments by John Hendricks, of New York, attorney for the Eastern Kentucky Coal and Land Corporation, and J. W. Stewart, of Ashland, Ky., and Taylor Vinson, of Prestonsburg, appeared before the Great Northern Coal and Coke Company, Commonwealth's attorney A. B. Stephenson dismissed the claim for the old Virginia land grants at Hindman, Knott county. When the decision was made cheer after cheer went up from the hundreds of mountaineers present. Later Hendricks announced that an appeal would be taken. The titles to 120,000 acres of coal lands, valued at an enormous figure, are involved.

SPOT OF BLOOD. On a Five-Dollar Bill Led To The Arrest of the Landlord.

Mayfield, Ky.—Ben Parker was indicted and arrested charged with the murder of the mysterious man whose body was found a few weeks ago in the ruins of the Parker boarding house here. He was also charged with arson.

Man was, but it is certain that he was murdered as a plain knife wound over an inch long is in his heart, which is under an evisceration. The real clue to Parker's guilt was the spending of a five-dollar bill in Paducah a few days after the murder with a spot of blood on it.

Kentucky Boy Wins Honors. Glasgow, Ky.—Clem A. Summers, the son of Mr. Murray Summers, formerly of this county, but now of Smith's Grove, Warren county, has been elected to represent Cumberland university in the Tennessee inter-collegiate oratorical contest. DESERTED BY PRESIDENT BONILLA

ARE THE FORCES OF HONDURAS AND SALVADOR.

And Cable Dispatches Indicate That the Central American War is Practically Ended.

Washington, March 25.—President Bonilla has fled from the battlefield and the Central American war has practically ended according to cable dispatches received in Washington by the Nicaraguan minister, Mr. Corea. The fall of the Honduran capital, Tegucigalpa, is predicted by the Nicaraguan secretary of foreign affairs, Mr. Gomez.

The cablegram from the secretary of foreign affairs is as follows: "Choluteca taken. Salvadorean and Honduran combined armies defeated. President Bonilla hidden in San Lorenzo with 200 men. Sent steamers to capture them. Tegucigalpa will be taken to-morrow." Gen. Ramirez, director general of telegraph and telephones, sends this message: "It is my opinion that the war is terminated. Bonilla has fled from Choluteca." When shown press dispatches announcing that President Bonilla had fled from Honduras by boat, Minister Corea expressed the opinion that the fugitive president would go to Salvador and again recruit his army for a second attack in Nicaragua unless the United States put an end to the war. He is firmly convinced that it will be only a question of a short time until hostilities are again resumed. The Nicaraguan minister will ask Secretary Root and Mexican Ambassador, Mr. Crael, to take some steps to force Salvador and Guatemala to keep neutrality pledge.

SIX KILLED, SEVENTEEN HURT.

And at Least Two Additional Bodies Under the Wreck.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 25.—A special train on the Alhambra, Tepica & Santa Fe railway, carrying scores of students home from an intercollegiate field meet at Claremont, collided head-on with outbound limited No. 2, on the same road, while both trains were moving at a rapid rate, within the city limits here. Six persons were killed and 17 injured, several of them fatally. Both engines, one of the baggage cars on the Overland (limited) and the smoker on the special were demolished. The crash was terrific and was attended by a shock felt from the scene. Workers at the wreck stated they were convinced there were at least two additional bodies under the wreck of the smoker.

Husband Took First Shot.

Pineville, Ala., March 25.—The negro, Cleveland Harding, who attempted to assault Mrs. Ben F. Rice near here Friday, and who was driven off by Mrs. Rice's shepherd dog, was summarily executed by the sheriff. The victim's husband and some 200 or 300 sympathizers. Tied to a tree, with his hands cuffed behind his back, he was shot. The negro was killed by a bullet in the head, it is said, every man in the crowd emptied his revolver at the prisoner.

Verdict, "Not Guilty."

Cartersburg, March 25.—The jury in the unwritten law murder case against Arthur Sanderson, who slew Dr. S. D. Meredith, a brother member of the Order of Eagles and his family physician, on the morning of January 1, brought in verdict of not guilty. According to one of the jurors, the verdict was reached upon the idea that the unwritten law must be upheld.

Sporting Man Shoots Himself.

Memphis, Tenn., March 25.—Suffering from what the police say was melancholia, Charles W. Wallace, a well-known sporting man, shot two revolvers at his place of business and inflicted wounds that caused almost instant death. John E. Roach, brother-in-law, was wounded attempting to prevent the man from his purpose.

Trim Fell Dead.

THE BUBBLE PIPE.

A man come to our house one time on hat a bubble pipe, an mamma she was mad because he blowed it in the police house, you know.

We go out in the kitchen when he blowed. He took his bubble pipe in took a match. En it lit back behind him with a scorching. En didn't have no soap, so he just lighted some sawdust in that bubble pipe on him. The end of it en blowed out of his head. Only the bubble was just smoke instead of soap.

En then he blowed "em wit no hands, en then. He put the pipe out of his mouth again en then he blowed "em wit no hands, en then. Smoke that fled up in the air en stayed.

En then he let me blow the pipe en I blowed all the sawdust out, en he says "You mustn't do that or the smoke won't come!"

Suck it! The baby brother sucks his thumb. En so I did but the old pipe was broke En blowed a nasty taste en not a single smoke!"

"Do you believe all this about a man being descended from a monkey?" "You surely ain't got the face to do it!" —Comic Cuts.

A Catch Question.

The civil service examiner was determining the fitness of a score of applicants for the police force. He questioned them in arithmetic, spelling and other standard subjects and then said he would test their hearing. He took his watch from his pocket and held it to the ear of a tall, handsome young man.

"Do you hear that tick?" he said.

"Yes; perfectly," the young man answered.

He held it a foot from the applicant's ear.

"Still hear it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now stand back three paces."

"Now," said the examiner, "do you hear it from that distance?"

The applicant listened intently. He said he heard it.

"You have the most wonderful hearing I ever came across," said the examiner enthusiastically. "That waiting hasn't been running for three weeks?"

—Woman's Home Companion.

What He Thought It Was.

Lloyd Griscorn, the new ambassador to Italy, tells of a baseball game he saw in Brazil. An Englishman was catcher for his side and did fairly well until a new pitcher was put in. The twirler sent in a hot one. The Englishman failed to hold the ball, which hit him on the nose and knocked him senseless. When he recovered he asked feebly, "What was it?" The umpire answered, "It was a foul." "A foul?" growled the poor catcher, "that waiting word. 'I thought it was a mule.'"

His Acknowledgment.

"Do you consider that luck has had anything to do with your success, Mr. Millymans?" "Certainly. I ain't no such a durn fool as to deny that there was a little luck about it. I remember one time when I was a boy I nearly got drowned while I was in swimming. It was just by good luck that another boy heard me yell. If I hadn't been pulled out, how could I ever become the man I am?" —Chicago Record-Herald.

Always Keeps Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in His House.

"We would not be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is kept on hand continually in our home," says W. W. Kearney, editor of the Independent, Lowry City, Mo. That is just what every family should do. When kept at hand ready for instant use, a cold may be checked at the outset and cured in much less time than after it has become settled in the system. This remedy is also without a peer for croup in children, even when the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, which can only be done when the remedy is kept at hand. Chestnut Dare

AS A SIRE HE HAS NO EQUAL.

Chestnut Dare is a sorrel stallion 7 years old, 16 hands one inch high, a large handsome saddle and harness horse with size, style, bone, finish, substance and conformation. This horse proved a successful show horse last summer winning 14 ties out of 15 shows.

Eight of his colts of last season sold at weanings from $100 to $150, the highest price of colts ever sold at same age by any horse owned or farmed in the county.

Chestnut Dare was sired by Chester Dare 10, 1st dam by Red Chief, 2nd dam by Black Hawk Chief, 3rd dam by Brinkers Dremont.

The Chester Dare's are recognized by all to be not only the highest priced but the greatest show family of horses in Kentucky and Chestnut Dare is a "worthy son of a great sire."

I wish to state that recently I was offered twice as much money for him as any stallion in the county ever sold for and three times as much as has been paid for a saddle and harness stallion brought in the county, so I ask the owners of good mares to patronize him as I can be justified in keeping this type of horse whose colts they can't beat or out sell.

$20.00

TO INSURE A MARE IN FOAL.

I still have my horse, Lexington Prince, to stand at $10, and my same two jacks at $10 and $5.

B. B. LEACHMAN.

MOORESVILLE.

Mr. Jas. Barlow, of Daviess county, is visiting relatives at this place.

Mr. Ed Sweeney and Love Settle were in Cincinnati last week.

Mr. Ed Youm and family and Mr. Jerome Trent were in Louisville last Monday.

We were at Woodlawn last week and found everything moving right along in the farming line. Sold about fifty dollars worth of fruit trees and prospects are bright for a good fall delivery.

Our people are sowing oats, planting gardens and preparing for a large corn and tobacco crop.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Chestman, of Woodlawn, died last Saturday and was interred at Mt. Zion cemetery Sunday.

Several of our people attended county court at Springfield Monday.

Mrs. Julia Cull and sister, Miss Mary Moore, were in Springfield Monday shopping.

Mrs. W. O. Ellis and daughter, Miss Nancy, visited at Bloomfield last Sunday.

We are glad to report Mrs. Jeff Smith as being convalescent.

BROOKSVILLE.

Born, since our last, to the wife of J. J. Sharp, a boy, and to the wife of Richard Sutton, a girl—Maggie D. Mrs. Ida Wells, of Willsburg, is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Mary Jane Birch.

Miss Olive Sutton, of Willsburg, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Artie Sutton, this week.

Mrs. Sennie Young visited her parents at Sharpville Sunday.

Misses Hester Noel and Sarah Keeling spent last Tuesday with Miss Mae Colvin.

Mr. Luther Coomey and family spent Sunday with Mr. Jim Baker, of Glens Creek.

A good many from this place attended county court at Springfield Monday. Mr. W. F. Chestman visited his mother at Polk Sunday.

Dr. M. W. Hyatt, of Springfield, visited his sister, Mrs. Tommie Birch, who is very sick.

Mr. Ralph H. Goldman, of New York City, was at this place one night last week.

"Afflicted With Rheumatism."

"I was and am yet afflicted with rheumatism," says Mr. C. J. Rayne, editor of the Herald, Adjoining, Indiana Territory, "but thanks to Chamberlain's Pain Balm I am able once more to attend to business. It is the best of liniments." If troubled with rheumatism give Pain Balm a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. One application relieves the pain. For sale by every reliable dealer in the Blue Grass.

Cheap Rates to Music Festival.

Railroads have granted a special rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip from points in Kentucky and Indiana to Louisville April 18, 19, and 20, good returning until April 21, on account of the music festival to be given in the army in that city on those dates. This festival will be the biggest musical event ever given in the South. Walter Demerch will be the conductor and his New York Symphony Orchestra and the Musical Club chorus of 325 voices will take part.

Among the soloists who have been engaged for the festival are Mrs. Marcella Sembrich, Mrs. Mary Henson, Miss Alice Stovering, Miss Cornelle Overstreet, Kelly Cole, Elson Van Housen, William Harper, Francis Macmillan, violinist, and Alexander Snelavsky, violinist. Five concerts will be given. The opening concert, Thursday night April 18, will be known as "Grand Wagner night." The oratorio, "Elijah" will be sung Friday night.

Bryan.

Detroit, March 22.—William Jennings Bryan, in an interview here, denied reports that Mayor Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, had been chosen to manage his next presidential campaign. Col. Bryan said that the only reason he could see for the starting of such a rumor was the fact that he recently visited Mayor Johnson over night. Col. Bryan said he had not decided whether he would be a candidate.

Speaking of the railroad situation, Col. Bryan expressed the opinion that the first step toward reform was to ascertain the value of the railroads, since a reasonable rate would be one that would give a reasonable return on a legitimate investment, and at present no one knew what the railroads were really worth.

Col. Bryan said that the La Follette resolution providing for the supervision of the railroads of the country, and which was voted down in Congress, ought to be reintroduced in the form of a bill and enacted into law.

"When the present value of the railroads is ascertained," he said, "stock should be taken to prevent any man watering of stock. No stock or bonds should be issued except for full value."

"Red Bird"

"Here we are now boys with 'Red Bird.' 'The Peacock of the Rock'."

The one we have been needing for a long time. I have been working to your interest for several years in trying to get this horse, and now it is up to you to work for my interest as well as yours. "If both of us work, we all work together."

Red Bird is the finest breeder in the State. The reason I can say this is because he has proven himself to be the best. His colts have sold for higher prices than any colts I can mention.

This horse is a standard bred saddle horse and is registered.

Look for my bills and other advertising in a short time.

Don't forget that I am still at the Fair Ground Stables, Springfield, Ky.

"Sun Shine"

I know you are not going to use saddle horses all-together so remember the famous harness horse SUN SHINE. Sun Shine defeated Glen Brooke at Standard and Lancaster last year. Also defeated Red Arbutle, another celebrated show horse that won at the Lexington State Fair. This goes to prove that he is a very fine horse, also a splendid breeder.

Look at his last year colts, they will prove what he is. They have style, firm and action and have the speed. Now gentlemen if you want a saddle horse you want one that can "step some," if you want a harness horse you want one that can "go."

"Bill Goebel"

Don't forget the great mule Jack Bill Goebel. No better breeder in the county.

Care taken to prevent accidents but I am not responsible should any occur.

See my ad. in next week's issue of The Sun.

Thanking you all for last years patronage and hoping to have it increased by the year 1907.

I am Yours Respectfully,

L. D. BAKER

Bitter, Bitter Thoughts.
